

I studied Materials Science at the Friedrich-Alexander University, Erlangen, Germany, where I graduated in 2004. After a year in industry I came back to university for my PhD. At the Hamburg University of Technology I work on ceramics produced by aluminothermic reaction. As I'm part of the group for advanced ceramics, I'm especially interested in the processing of ceramic materials.

Apart from work, I like travelling. Especially Southamerica I'm really fond of. Last year I discovered paragliding for me, something I'm enthusiastic about, even though I'm still learning it.
